

Area Description

Tverskaya Street springs from Red Square and stretches to the north where it spills over to Leningradsky prospect. Expensive hotels, fashionable shops and dozens of different restaurants are located in this area. Tverskaya is decorated in lights of different colors and advertising boards throughout the year. During the May holidays, Pancake week, Day of the City and other holidays, the traffic on Tverskaya is diverted and the street turns into a major party avenue with parades, demonstrations and street concerts. Lucky people (bargees) whose windows face Tverskaya can participate in all the events without going out of doors.

There is no place merrier and more «central» for young people than this area. Patriarshy Prudy is a quiet residential district in the very heart of Moscow favored by local citizens and foreigners alike. Patricki, as people blandly name this district, is ideally positioned within walking distance to five metro stations and near central streets (Sadovoe Ring, Bulvarnoe Ring, Tverskaya and New Arbat). The area received its name from the charming city park with a pond surrounded by residential buildings at its heart. Fashionable Moscow restaurants, cafes and also several embassies are located here.
